Part Ⅲ　Reading Comprehension (25 points)

Section A

Directions: In this section, there are four passages followed by questions or unfinished statements, each with four suggested answers A, B, C and D. Choose the best answer and mark your answer on the Answer Sheet.

Passage One

The rising popularity of having goods delivered directly to one's doorstep has come with increased attention on another phenomenon: porch theft. In communities across the country, residents have expressed concern about stolen packages. Now, lawmakers around the country are aiming to crack down on it.

Brookhaven police has launched "Operation Plugged In", a program that allows residents and businesses to register their private surveillance (监控) cameras with the department, so that police can request video contents if a crime occurs in a certain area. Hundreds of individuals and businesses have registered their cameras as part of the program.

This technology has made policing quicker and easier, said Jacob Kissel, an officer at the Brookhaven police department. "We used to go out and knock on everybody's door after a crime happened. Now we can pull up a map and there are bullet points of all of our registered residents with cameras," he added. That allows police to simply pick up the phone and ask residents: "Can you look at your system? Is there anything that you may be able to provide us?"

Scholars who study surveillance and package theft raise concerns around the widespread use of technology to catch package thieves however. For instance, facial recognition technology has been known to misidentify people with darker skin tones. One research has also shown that predominantly white neighborhoods use doorbell cameras and related platforms more frequently than their non-white counterparts, and may often use these platforms to practice "racial gate keeping", which can lead to increased policing of communities of color.

Lawmakers say the new laws making package theft a felony reflect the deep concerns of their constituents. But it's unclear whether residents truly feel that strongly about the issue. One Brookhaven resident said his package was stolen last year and it was not a big deal. Since the incidents last fall, package theft has not been an issue in the community, and he was surprised to hear that police were building a felony case around the thefts. "I honestly think that's a little extreme," said Sabah Khandaker, another Brookhaven resident. "A lot of the resources go into finding someone that has stolen a package. They could be reallocated somewhere else."

21. "Operation Plugged In" allows the police to _____.

A. use the videos from registered cameras
B. check on the residents with cameras
C. install more surveillance cameras
D. require residents to register their cameras

22. What is paragraph 4 mainly concerned with?

A. Violation of privacy.
B. Racial discrimination.
C. Abuse of technology.
D. Policing efficiency.

23. The word "felony" (Para. 5) is closest in meaning to _____.

A. minor offense
B. dishonest behavior
C. immoral conduct
D. serious crime

24. What does Khandaker think of the crackdown on package thefts?

A. It will turn out rewarding.
B. It hurts resident relationships.
C. It seems to be an overreaction.
D. It will achieve the intended effect.

25. What is the author's tone in discussing package thefts?

A. Ironic.
B. Objective.
C. Relieved.
D. Humorous.

Passage Two

There is a concept in the psychological literature known as locus of control that is unfamiliar to most people, even though, once defined, is commonly understood. Locus of control is an individual's belief system regarding the causes of his or her experiences and the factors to which that person attributes success or failure.

This concept is usually divided into two categories: internal and external. If a person has an internal locus of control, that person attributes success to his or her own efforts and abilities. A person who expects to succeed will be more motivated and more likely to learn. A person with an external locus of control, by contrast, often attributes his or her success to luck or fate and will be less likely to make the effort needed to learn. People with an external locus control are also more likely to experience anxiety since they believe that they are not in control of their lives. This is not to say, however, that an internal locus of control is "good" and an external locus of control is "bad". There are other variables to be considered. However, psychological research has found that people with a more internal locus of control seem to be better off, e. g., they tend to be more achievement-oriented and get better-paying jobs.

Locus of control is often viewed as an inborn personality component. However, there is also evidence that it is shaped by childhood experiences—including children's interactions with their parents. Children who were raised by parents who encouraged their independence and helped them to learn the connection between actions and their consequences tended to have a more well-developed internal locus of control.

The benefits of this were specified in a research study that looked at the potential health effects of the locus of control trait. Researchers found that of more than 7,500 British adults followed since birth, those who had shown an internal locus of control at the age of 10 were less likely to be overweight at age 30, less likely to describe their health as poor, or show high levels of psychological stress. The major explanation for these findings was that children with a more internal locus of control behave more healthily as adults because they have greater confidence in their ability to influence outcomes through their own actions. They may also have higher self-esteem.

26. It is stated in paragraph 1 that locus of control is _____.

A. intensively discussed by researchers
B. familiar to most people
C. a method to avoid failure
D. a belief of what determines success

27. People with an internal locus of control tend to _____.

A. categorize things as either good or bad
B. be more motivated and hardworking
C. feel they are not in control of their lives
D. experience more anxiety than other people

28. Which of the following seems to be supported by psychological research?

A. An external locus of control is better than an internal one.
B. An external locus of control brings poor work performance.
C. An internal locus of control is affected by luck or fate.
D. An internal locus of control may lead to higher income.

29. A more well-developed internal locus of control _____.

A. is inherited from one's parents
B. can be affected by childhood experiences
C. should be leaded at school by teachers
D. is strengthened by financial independence

30. Why does the author mention research study in the last paragraph?

A. To show the benefits of internal locus of control.
B. To compare the findings of psychological stress.
C. To illustrate the importance of healthy habits.
D. To explain the origin of locus of control.

Passage Three

I'm an oceanographer who focuses on the study of the ocean. One of my research interests is amphipods (片脚类生物), a kind of tiny sea creature with a soft body and a hard outer shell. Amphipods often live in the canyons (峡谷) under the sea. They are a food source for larger organisms, fueling the food chain and ultimately the species that humans catch and eat. There are thousands upon thousands of amphipod species all over the world in fresh and salty water, from the surface to the deep sea. We can think of amphipods as a key species—one that helps indicate how healthy an ecosystem is—because they are so common across the oceans. This was a factor in my decision to study them.

I didn't directly observe how the amphipod species lives its life. Instead, I compared what I knew about it to studies of similar species. This allowed me to make assumptions about its lifestyle. For instance, amphipods have excellent "smell" detecting abilities because large food falls are few and far between. For some female amphipods, finding these food falls is especially important because they must stuff themselves before reproducing.

By the end of my studies, I was keenly aware of the difficulties in studying deep-sea organisms. The challenges are not just limited to accessing their habitats. It's also tough to locate the organisms themselves. Finding amphipods in the deep, open ocean is like finding needles in a haystack. Scientists sometimes use large nets to scoop (舀取) up whatever is in the sea around them, but there's no guarantee that they'll get what they are looking for.

I presented my research at a big sustainability symposium, which allowed me to hear more about human activities that affect amphipods. Offshore oil exploration is one example. The process of looking for oil in the seafloor may reduce the availability of food for deep-sea organisms, including amphipods. As their populations decrease, the food sources for larger organisms, like the fish we want to eat, start disappearing too. Amphipods and humans seem to be worlds apart. And yet harm to rarely seen organisms in the deepest darkest depths of the ocean could end up hurting us in the not-too-distant future.

31. The author decided to study amphipods because _____.

A. they show the health condition of an ecosystem

B. they are a main source of seafood for humans

C. it's valuable to compare them with other species

D. it's interesting to learn about their living habits

32. Why are large food falls important for female amphipods?

A. They are the only food source for amphipods.

B. They help to attract male amphipods.

C. They enhance amphipods' sense of smell.

D. They are needed for amphipods' reproduction.

33. The phrase "finding needles in a haystack" (Para. 3) is used to indicate _____.

A. the high cost of capturing amphipods

B. the difficulty of finding amphipods in the sea

C. the urgency in locating amphipods' habitats

D. the challenge to tell amphipods from similar species

34. Which of the following may bring harm to amphipods?

A. Seasonal overfishing.

B. Fish farming at sea.

C. Exploring oil resources.

D. Searching for sea organisms.

35. What can be learned about the relations between amphipods and humans?

A. Harm to amphipods will affect humans soon.

B. Amphipods and humans live in separate worlds.

C. Human activities lead to the growth of amphipods.

D. Amphipods pose a threat to fishing industry.

Passage Four

Europeans play football, and Americans play football; but surprisingly they do not play the same game. American football is played by men (and occasionally women) wearing helmets and protective clothing; the ball is oval. European football is played with a round ball, by people wearing just socks, shorts, a shirt, and football boots.

Americans have another popular outdoor game too—baseball, a classic American game that is only played seriously in North America. In Britain, a few people play an "ancestor" of baseball, called "rounders" but it is not a popular sport.

In today's "global village" lifestyles are becoming international. Often the American model has spread to other countries of the world. American sports, however, have not spread all over the world as American films and American fashions have. On the contrary, European sports have been more successful internationally. Indeed European football is slowly developing in the USA.

In motor racing too, though it is not really a team sport, the USA is different. In Europe, South America, Japan and other countries (including Canada) "motor racing" means "Formula 1"; Americans have IndyCar racing. The Indianapolis 500 is like a Formula 1 race, but different. Several famous Formula 1 drivers—including Nigel Mansell and Jacques Villeneuve have won the race. On the other hand, no American IndyCar drivers have ever been Formula 1 champions. Nevertheless, Americans are beginning to discover Formula 1 racing since the first American Grand Prix.

Besides these sports, America of course has basketball—perhaps the most successful "export". Invented at Springfield College, Massachusetts, in 1891, basketball is quite certainly an American game. Although it is not as big in Europe as in the USA, basketball has become much more popular in other countries than any other American team sports.

Why is America different? The answer is simple. Until the 1960's team sports were not played on a global scale. The only real "global" sports were individual sports, such as golf and tennis. A hundred years ago, individual rich Americans could travel to Europe on holiday, and play these two games. But whole teams of sportsmen did not often travel around the world, it was too expensive and slow!

36. Which statement is true about the description of football?

A. American football is round while European's is oval.

B. European football players wear protective clothing.

C. American football is mainly played by males.

D. Rules for football games are similar across the world.

37. What can we learn about the current "global village" (Para. 3)?

A. Globalization of lifestyles is taking place.

B. American sports are as popular as its films worldwide.

C. European football has replaced American football.

D. Different cultures have shaped the American model.

38. American motor racing drivers _____.

A. are opposed to Formula 1 racing

B. often win Formula 1 race

C. have strong team spirit

D. take part in IndyCar racing

39. According to paragraph 5, American basketball _____.

A. reserves its unique American style

B. was brought in by Europeans in the 19th century

C. has spread to many other countries

D. is the most popular team sport in Europe

40. American team sports were difficult to spread internationally due to _____.

A. high travelling cost

B. lack of team spirit

C. fierce competition

D. high demand of skill

Section B

Directions: In this section, you are required to read one quoted blog and the comments on it. The blog and comments are followed by questions or unfinished statements, each with four suggested answers A, B, C and D. Choose the best answer and mark your answer on the Answer Sheet.

World Mental Health (WMH) Day, on 10 October, is a day to raise awareness of the effects mental illness has on millions of people's lives across the world, and to help educate and inform us all.

Around the world, one in four people will have some mental illness during their lifetime. Around 450 million people are living with a mental health problem right now, making it one of the biggest health issues in the world. Yet people rarely talk about any mental health problems they have because it is humiliating.

WMH Day was first celebrated in 1992 to raise awareness of just how common mental health issues are, fight against stigma (污名) and campaign for better conditions and treatment for people who have a mental health problem. The number of people and organizations involved in celebrating WMH Day has grown and grown, and now many countries, such as Australia, even have a Mental Health Week. Each year there is a different theme. For example, in 2017 the theme was mental health in the workplace.

WMH Day encourages us to be more aware of both our own mental health and other people's. As well as looking after yourself, think about how you could support other people. For example, you could find out more about common issues such as anxiety and depression, so you will understand friends' and colleagues' problems better. You could also encourage your workplace to start a wellness program that would benefit everyone. Companies with wellness programs have found employees take 28 per cent less time off for sickness.

Comment 1:

Spending less time online is a huge factor to reduce anxiety and depression. Also avoiding negativity could help a lot.

Comment 2:

Celebrating the day is just the first step. Daily education matters.

Comment 3:

This could involve chatting on social media, hearing music, browsing new ideas, attending events and so on.

Comment 4:

It's very difficult to persuade a person that he/she has some mental problems. It's easier for them to reject all the offers of their relatives to see a doctor than to admit they have been ill.

Comment 5:

This topic is necessary and important to discuss. Many people suffer from mental illness and it is vital to talk about it every day rather than on a special day.

41. Which of the following is true about mental illness around the world?

A. It is not as serious as people think.
B. A majority of people suffer from it.
C. A shameful feeling is attached to it.
D. People are eager to understand it.

42. What can we learn about WMH Day?

A. It was first celebrated in Australia.
B. Millions of people celebrate it every year.
C. Mental health in the workplace is the constant theme.
D. It advocates care of mental health for oneself and others.

43. According to Comment 1, what may result in mental illness?

A. Unfair treatment.
B. Limited access to the Internet.
C. Tense human relations.
D. Negative attitude.

44. Which comment stresses people's unwillingness to admit their mental problems?

A. Comment 2.
B. Comment 3.
C. Comment 4.
D. Comment 5.

45. Which comments call for consistent efforts to improve mental health?

A. Comment 1 and Comment 3.
B. Comment 2 and Comment 5.
C. Comment 1 and Comment 4.
D. Comment 3 and Comment 5.
