Passage One

Being sociable looks like a good way to add years to your life. Relationships with family, friends, neighbours, even pets, will all do the trick, but the biggest longevity (长寿) boost seems to come from marriage or an equivalent relationship. The effect was first noted in 1858 by William Farr, who wrote that widows and widowers (鳏夫) were at a much higher risk of dying than their married peers. Studies since then suggest that marriage could add as much as seven years to a man's life and two to a woman's. The effect holds for all causes of death, whether illness, accident or self – harm.

Even if the odds are stacked against you, marriage can more than compensate. Linda Waite of the University of Chicago has found that a married older man with heart disease can expect to live nearly four years longer than an unmarried man with a healthy heart. Likewise., a married man who smokes more than a pack a day is likely to live as long as a divorced man who doesn't smoke. There's a flip side, however, as partners are more likely to become ill or die in the couple of years following their spouse's death, and caring for a spouse with mental disorder can leave you with some of the same severe problems. Even so, the odds favour marriage. In a 30 – years study of more than 10,000 people, Nicholas Christakis of Harvard Medical School describes how all kinds of social networks have similar effects.

So how does it work? The effects are complex, affected by socio-economic factors, health-service provision, emotional support and other more physiological (生理的) mechanisms. For example, social contact can boost development of the brain and immune system, leading to better health and less chance of depression later in life. People in supportive relationships may handle stress better. Then there are the psychological benefits of a supportive partner.

A life partner, children and good friends are all recommended if you aim to live to 100. The ultimate social network is still being mapped out, but Christakis says: "People are interconnected, so their health is interconnected. "

21. William Farr's study and other studies show that _____.

A. social life provides an effective cure for illness

B. being sociable helps improve one's quality of life

C. women benefit more than men from marriage

D. marriage contributes a great deal to longevity

22. Linda Waite's studies support the idea that _____.

A. older men should quit smoking to stay healthy

B. marriage can help make up for ill health

C. the married are happier than the unmarried

D. unmarried people are likely to suffer in later life

23. It can be inferred from the context that the "flip side"(Line 4, Para. 2) refers to _____.

A. the disadvantages of being married

B. the emotional problems arising from marriage

C. the responsibility of taking care of one's family

D. the consequence of a broken marriage

24. What does the author say about social networks?

A. They have effects similar to those of a marriage.

B. They help develop people's community spirit.

C. They provide timely support for those in need.

D. They help relieve people of their life's burdens.

25. What can be inferred from the last paragraph?

A. It's important that we develop a social network when young.

B. To stay healthy, one should have a proper social network.

C. Getting a divorce means risking a reduced life span.

D. We should share our social networks with each other

Passage Two

When I saw the notice "Women film extras wanted" in a local newspaper, I jumped at the chance. Since childhood, I had dreamt of being a film star. The casting interview went well, and two days later I was told that I had been chosen. I was to lose some of my enthusiasm for the idea, however extras are often left in the dark for some time as to which role they will play. Finally, the nature of my role was revealed: I was asked to play a mental hospital patient. Despite my disappointment, I agreed to participate. Then, barely a week later, the day of filming dawned. An 13 of us extras, mainly housewives, were driven to an old hospital. The coffee and tea they served us looked and tasted like cement. Then we were rushed off to make-up. My hair was pinned back and make-up was applied that gave me a pale appearance. Then we just sat in a minibus for a few hours, as the cameras rolled elsewhere.

After the second hour had passed I was becoming bored. I bet stars are never treated like this, I thought. I had expected to be so busy that I hadn't come prepared for a long wait. Many of the others had brought a book or knitting.

Three hours had now passed. Then at last we were called to do our scenes. When the director came in, we were instructed where to stand and what to do. Along with a few others, I was told to sit at a table and weave baskets. This was not an easy task. The cane (藤条) we had to use was very long. On several occasions my basket fell apart in front of my very eyes. On others I only succeeded in hitting a cameraman in the eye.

Life for the other extras was far from easy. Jean, who was barefoot, had to circle the floor. Poor Alice was asked to pretend to bang her head against the wall. Meanwhile, Veronica swept the floor.

Thankfully, after just a few attempts, the scenes were done. And so my first taste of this "glorious" career was over. Although I found the experience quite interesting, my first screen role will almost certainly be my last.

26. The word "extras" used in this story means people who _____.

A. play unimportant parts in a film

B. have little experience of acting

C. pretend to be film stars

D. need a part-time job

27. According to the story, which of the following statements is true about the author?

A. She understood clearly that most film stars used to be extras.

B. She didn't refuse the role assigned to her although she didn't like it.

C. Unlike other women who were reading or knitting, she was busy with her scene.

D. The only thing she did well was to use the cane as a weapon.

28. Alice, one of the 13 women extras, was probably playing the role of _____.

A. a doctor working in the mental hospital

B. a nurse who was helping her patients

C. another patient with mental problem

D. another housewife busy with her work

Passage Three

Unless we spend money to spot and prevent asteroids (小行星) now, one might crash into Earth and destroy life as we know it, say some scientists.

Asteroids are bigger versions of the meteoroids (流星) that race across the night sky. Most orbit the sun far from Earth and don't threaten us. But there are also thousands whose orbits put them on a collision course with Earth.

Buy $40 million worth of new telescopes right now. Then spend $10 million a year for the next 25 years to locate most of the space rocks. By the time we spot a fatal one, the scientists say, we'll have a way to change its course.

Some scientists favor pushing asteroids off course with nuclear weapons. But the cost wouldn't be cheap.

Is it worth it? Two things experts consider when judging any risk are: 1) How likely the event is; 2) How bad the consequences if the event occurs. Experts think an asteroid big enough to destroy lots of life might strike Earth once every 400,000 years. Sounds pretty rare—but if one did fall, it would be the end of the world. "If we don't take care of these big asteroids, they'll take care of us," says one scientist. "It's that simple."

The cure, though, might be worse than the disease. Do we really want fleets of nuclear weapons sitting around on Earth? "The world has less to fear from doomsday (毁灭性的) rocks than from a great nuclear fleet set against them," said a New York Times article.

31. What does the passage say about asteroids and meteoroids?

A. They are heavenly bodies different in composition.

B. They are heavenly bodies similar in nature.

C. There are more asteroids than meteoroids.

D. Asteroids are more mysterious than meteoroids.

32. What do scientists say about the collision of an asteroid with Earth?

A. It is very unlikely but the danger exists.

B. Such a collision might occur once every 25 years.

C. Collisions of smaller asteroids with Earth occur more often than expected.

D. It's still too early to say whether such a collision might occur.

33. What do people think of the suggestion of using nuclear weapons to alter the course of asteroids?

A. It sounds practical but it may not solve the problem.

B. It may create more problems than it might solve.

获取更多【考研考公等】课程资料添加微信：xuexi-1688（考试学院） 学习省心省力 ！

C. It is a waste of money because a collision of asteroids with Earth is very unlikely.

D. Further research should be done before it is proved applicable.

34. We can conclude from the passage that _____.

A. while pushing asteroids off course nuclear weapons would destroy the world

B. asteroids racing across the night sky are likely to hit Earth in the near future

C. the worry about asteroids can be left to future generations since it is unlikely to happen in our lifetime

D. workable solutions still have to be found to prevent a collision of asteroids with Earth

35. Which of the following best describes the author's tone in this passage?

A. Optimistic.　　B. Critical.

C. Objective.　　D. Arbitrary.

Passage Four

Today only one person in five in the United States lives within 50 miles of his birthplace. Since the country was first settled, Americans have moved around a great deal, and are often far away from their parents. Because they have broken ties with their past at a young age, chosen their own occupations, established their own homes and developed their own lifestyles, few American children grow up closely surrounded by grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins as they do in Italy, Nigeria, or India, for example. This along with the fact that modern American families do not have servants has made the "babysitter" a vital part of the American scene. A "sitter" is someone who is hired to care for children for a specific length of time—usually relatively short—while the parents are out for an evening, going to a party or a course of study for example. Sometimes the babysitter is also hired for longer period, perhaps when the parents are away for a weekend. In such cases the "sitter" is likely to be a mature and motherly woman. For short periods, teenagers, college students, nursing students, and others are commonly employed on an hourly basis.

From the point of view of convenience, the best sitters are often young people who live in your apartment building or close by in the neighborhood. This gives you a chance to meet the parents and see what they are like. If an emergency occurs, young sitters can call upon their parents quickly for help; you do not have to take them far to see them home at night or pay expensive taxi fares. Another advantage is that young people living close by can usually fill in quite readily on short notice or for short periods of time.

In an apartment house you can ask the superintendent for permission to post a notice for a babysitter by the mailboxes. This is often the best way to find out if there is anyone in the building who is interested in babysitting. Retired people as well as students are often glad to earn a little money in this way and can be found by such a note.

36. We can infer from the first paragraph that _____.

A. the American is a movable and independent nation

B. the Americans are often far away from their parents

C. the Children in Italy, Nigeria, or India doesn't feel like living with their parents

D. the Americans broke ties with their past at a young age

Psychologists warn that plastic surgery can lead to an identity crisis, among other psychological issues. If you were a fan of the MTV reality series The Hills, you'll remember the complete physical transformation of Heidi Montag. In mere months, she went from a petite (矮小), natural beauty from Colorado to resembling some sort of blonde Barbie as a result of multiple facial and body reconstructive surgeries that she didn't even attempt to hide from the public. What's worse is that she was in her early 20s at the time.

We all figured that deep psychological issues were at the root of Montag's shocking procedure list, and now, according to a number of U. S. psychologists, we can safely assume that she may also be suffering from an identity crisis.

Psychologist Paul Lorene tells the Daily Mail that most patients undergo cosmetic surgery for the wrong reasons, wanting to look similar to a particular model or actor. "They have this glorified picture of this perfect identity," he says, and this can lead to deep psychological problems when the patients discover the identity they were after isn't actually perfect.

Often people don't realize the attachments they have to their facial features until they alter them with surgery. Perhaps you always hated your large nose, but whether you liked it or not, it was a part of you for your life thus far. If you have surgery to make it smaller, it is reasonable to believe that your self identity could suffer if you end up feeling disconnected from your own face that is now unfamiliar.

Do you think cosmetic surgeries can cause identity crisis?

Comment 1:

The image that people see in the mirror and take for granted actually runs deeper. After 10 appearance-altering surgery, some patients come to realize "that imperfection is actually part of their identity".

Comment 2:

The identity crisis exists long before the surgery takes place. If you don't get plastic surgery you will still have an identity crisis. I have identity crisis every morning when I look in the mirror. When did I get older? And where the hell is my hair?

Comment 3:

To quote American Judge Judy, "Beauty fades, dumb is forever."

Comment 4:

When you look in the mirror and don't recognize yourself, then you have an identity crisis. Really, these studies and articles of this sort are stating the obvious.

41. The main idea of the quoted blog is that _____.

A. some people undergo facial surgery for wrong reasons

B. the patients will eventually find facial surgeries unsatisfying

C. plastic surgery can cause a loss of self identity

D. people's facial features are important for their self identity

42. According to the blog, Heidi Montag _____.

A. was ugly before she received reconstructive surgeries

B. is suffering from a serious identity crisis now

C. has changed drastically after the reconstructive surgeries

D. was reluctant to show her greatly-changed beauty in public

43. Among all the comments, which seems in disagreement with the main idea of the blog?

A. Comment 1　　B. Comment 2

C. Comment 3　　D. Comment 4

44. By saying "Beauty fades, dumb is forever", Judge Judy means that _____.

A. it is unwise trying to have beauty by taking plastic surgeries.

B. plastic surgery or no plastic surgery, everyone will get old.

C. to keep beauty, you have to take plastic surgeries again and again.

D. beauty cannot cover up foolishness.

45. According to the writer of Comment 4, the studies on the relationship of plastic surgery and identity crisis _____.

A. is meaningful　　B. should be deepened

C. is quite ridiculous　　D. is a waste of time
