Part Ⅰ Oral Communication (10 points)

► Section A

Directions: In this section there are two incomplete dialogues and each dialogue has three blanks and three choices A, B and C, taken from the dialogue. Fill in each of the blanks with one of the choices to complete the dialogue and mark your answer on the Answer Sheet.

Dialogue One

A. All you need now is a good, long rest

B. I caught a bad cold last week

C. You look run-down

Alice: ___1___, Pat.

Pat: Yeah. I've been feeling under the weather recently. ___2___, and I still haven't gotten over it.

Alice: Well, you want to take sick leave? ___3___.

Pat: I guess so. Even though I seem to be over the worst of it, I don't want to give the bug to anyone in the office.

Alice: Yes. Better not.

Dialogue Two

A. great minds think alike

B. We could do it first thing tomorrow morning

C. We still have to do about ten more

Nancy: How many orders do we still need to pack, Gilbert? We've been packing all day.

Gilbert: ___4___.

Nancy: Well, I'm really tired from packing all of the stuff all day. And it's about time to clock out.

A. I'd like to know your health benefit and pay scale

B. you want an experienced software engineer

C. I have designed some programs for the network with VisualC + +

D. I am quite familiar with database programming, VisualC + + and Java language

Zheng Hai: Excuse me. I have an appointment with Ms. Wang. May I come in?

Ms. Wang: Yes, come in please. I am Ms. Wang. You must be Zheng Hai, right? I'd like to start this interview with some questions. Why do you think you are qualified for this position?

Zheng Hai: According to your advertisement, ___7___. I think my background meets the requirement of this position.

Ms. Wang: Then tell me something about your background.

Zheng Hai: My major was computer science when I was in Wuhan University, and ___8___.

Ms. Wang: Have you ever designed any programs concerning network?

Zheng Hai: Yes, ___9___ and I have passed the test for programmers MCSE.

Ms. Wang: Well, your background and qualifications are impressive. Do you have any questions?

Zheng Hai: ___10___.

Ms. Wang: Certainly. We can provide health and medical benefit. Our pay scale to computer engineer is from five thousand to eight thousand. Employees in our company also enjoy a two – week vocation with pay every year.

Part Ⅱ Vocabulary (10 points)

Directions: In this part there are ten sentences, each with one word or phrase underlined. Choose the one from the four choices marked A, B, C and D that best keeps the meaning of the sentence. Mark your answer on the Answer Sheet.

Part Ⅲ Reading Comprehension (25 points)

► Section A

Directions: In this section there are four passages followed by questions or unfinished statements, each with four suggested answers A, B, C and D. Choose the best answer and mark your answer on the Answer Sheet.

Passage One

Oceanography has been defined as "The application of all sciences to the study of the sea". Before the nineteenth century, scientists with an interest in the sea were few and far between. Certainly Newton considered some theoretical aspects of it in his writings, but he was reluctant to go to sea to further his work.

For most people the sea was remote, and with the exception of early intercontinental travelers or others who earned a living from the sea, there was little reason to ask many questions about it let alone to ask what lay beneath the surface. The first time that question "What is at the bottom of the oceans?" had to be answered with any commercial consequence was when the laying of a telegraph cable from Europe to America was proposed. The engineers had to know the depth profile of the route to estimate the length of cable that had to be manufactured.

It was to Maury of the U. S. Navy that the Atlantic Telegraph Company turned, in 1853, for information on this matter. In the 1840s, Maury had been responsible for encouraging voyages during which soundings were taken to investigate the depths of the North Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. Later, some of his findings aroused much popular interest in his book The Physical Geography of the Sea.

The cable was laid, but not until 1866 was the connection made permanent and reliable. At the early attempts, the cable failed and when it was taken out for repairs it was found to be covered in living growths, a fact which defied contemporary scientific opinion that there was no life in the deeper parts of the sea.

Within a few years oceanography was under way. In 1872 Thomson led a scientific expedition which lasted for four years and brought home thousands of samples from the sea. Their classification and analysis occupied scientists for years and led to a five-volume report, the last volume being published in 1895.

21. The proposal to lay a telegraph cable from Europe to America made oceanographic studies take on _____.

A. an academic aspect　　B. a military aspect

C. a business aspect　　D. an international aspect

22. The aim of the voyages Maury was responsible for in the 1840s was _____.

A. to make some sounding experiments in the oceans

B. to collect samples of sea plants and animals

C. to estimate the length of cable that was needed

D. to measure the depths of the two oceans

23. "Defied" in the 4th paragraph probably means "_____".

A. doubted　　B. gave proof to　　C. contradicted　　D. agreed to

24. This passage is mainly about _____.

A. the beginnings of oceanography

B. the laying of the first undersea cable

C. the investigation of ocean depths

D. the early intercontinental communications

25. What does the sentence "Within a few years oceanography was under way" mean?

A. Several years later the study of oceanography disappeared.

B. More and more studies and expeditions on oceanography began to appear.

C. The expedition led by Thomson began in 1872.

D. The five-volume report was published in 1895.

Passage Two

It was two years ago today that the hunting ban came into force, supposedly ending centuries of tradition. However, the law has been an unmitigated failure—not that either side is shouting about it.

It was a nightmare vision that struck fear and loathing into the hearts of millions. When the hunting ban became law, it was said, 16,000 people would lose their jobs, thousands of hounds would be put down, rotting carcasses would litter the countryside, hedgerows would disappear, riders would face on-the-spot fines, law-abiding people from doctors to barristers would be dragged from their horses and carted off to prison, while dog owners would be prosecuted if their mutt caught a rabbit.

These were just some of the claims as desperate countryside campaigners battled to save their sport in the lead—up to the hunting ban, which Labour rammed into law using the Parliament Act on November 18, 2004.

For many, the fears were real. Others exaggerated as they fought an increasingly aggressive anti-hunting lobby which had rejected acres of independent evidence affirming that hunting is the most humane way of killing foxes. In the battle to "fight prejudice, fight the ban", every emotive argument was deployed.

For its part, the anti-hunting brigade extravagantly claimed that the ban would put an end to the rich parading in red jackets. A senior Labour MP, Peter Bradley, admitted in this newspaper that it was, as many suspected, about "class war". He lost his seat shortly afterwards. But people in red coats did not disappear.

In fact, none of the forecasts came true. What did happen was something nobody had predicted: the spectacular revival and growth of hunting with hounds. In short, the hunting ban has been a failure.

Today, on the second anniversary of the ban's coming into force on February 18, 2005, new figures show that participation in the sport has never been higher. It is so cheerful that two new packs have been formed, something that has not happened for centuries.

They include the seductively named Private Pack, set up by the financier Roddy Fleming in Gloucestershire. It operates on an invitation-only basis, a sort of hunting private members' club. This can only mean one thing: like it or not, hunting is cool. Young people are taking it up, enticed by the element of rebellion and the mystique of what actually happens as hunts attempt to keep within the law.

26. The hunting ban has been a complete failure because _____.

A. the hunting has never been stopped but has instead flourished

B. the government has been short of hands to enforce the law

C. the law makers failed to see hunting as a long-time tradition

获取更多【同等学力】课程资料添加微信：xuexi-1688（考试学院） 学习省心省力 ！

D. the ban aimed to protect the interests of the upper-class only

27. Those who break the hunting ban would _____.

A. lose their jobs

B. bring shame to their fellow people

C. have to kill their horses and dogs

D. face either fines or imprisonment

28. The anti-hunting lobby held that _____.

A. fox-hunting was an expression of prejudice

B. the countryside campaigners were reasonable

C. the theory of humane killing did not hold water

D. the hunters exaggerated the dreadful scene of hunting

29. By saying "people in red coats did not disappear," the author implied that _____.

A. the upper class won the "war"

B. Bradley deserved his fate

C. the hunting ban did not work

D. the hunting ban was untimely

30. As a result of the ban, _____.

A. hunting activities have become more secretive

B. people have become more curious about hunting

C. citizens have become more confused by the law

D. the country tradition has been radically shaken

Passage Three

Some of the most popular attractions across America are the many free concerts offered to the public throughout the year. These involve not only amateur performers, but professional artists as well. The public parks of many cities across the country usually have bandstands and large lawns. As a service to citizens, they rent out space to performers free of charge. Amateur groups, with nothing more than a desire to perform, offer their talents freely to the public. Semi-professional artists are pleased to get the chance to perform before the public to perfect their craft and nurture the hope of being discovered before beginning a professional career. Famous professionals also give free concerts to make contact with their admiring fans. Often such concerts are sponsored by a large corporate organization and offered to the public free of charge as a cultural service and support for the arts.

The free concerts feature all kinds of music from rock and roll, jazz, country-western to the classics. In addition, free performances may include the plays of Shakespeare or experimental theater of modern dramatists. In New York's Central Park there has long been a summer Shakespeare festival which draws huge crowds to the free performances.

Of these concerts the ones held on a summer evening in the park are the most popular. They take on a festive air. Friends and groups gather together after work and spread out a blanket on the lawn facing the performers' stage. The early comers get the best locations and enjoy a picnic supper while it is still daylight. The free seating is on a first come basis. Therefore, by the time the concert begins, as many as five thousand or more people may be in attendance. The concerts usually begin at 8 p. m. and are performed under the stars. The sound is made sufficiently loud so that no matter where one chooses to sit, he can hear very well. The only disturbance may be the sound of an overhead airplane on its final approach to an airport or the far-off siren (警笛声) of an ambulance on its way to the hospital. This matters little! What counts is to soak up the atmosphere created by the music and to be with friends in the fresh open air. The best part of it all is that it's free!

31. Many American parks give free concerts on their lawns because they _____.

A. have the necessary facilities　　B. can attract more visitors

C. want to serve the public　　D. are in a position to invite musicians

32. The concerts in parks are often financially supported by _____.

A. the parks themselves　　B. big organizations

C. professional musicians　　D. music fans

33. For semi-professional artists, performing before the public is a good chance _____.

A. to improve themselves in their career　　B. to help train amateur performers

C. to make friends with superstars　　D. to get involved in profitable business

34. The concerts can attract so many people mainly because _____.

A. the attendants don't have to pay　　B. the seating is on a first come basis

C. they provide free picnic supper　　D. they are held in the open air

35. The phrase "soak up" in the last paragraph probably means _____.

A. absorb　　B. warm up　　C. enjoy　　D. use up

Passage Four

Scraps of food could soon be helping power your home, thanks to an ultra-cheap bacteria-driven battery. Its developers hope that instead of feeding the dog or making garden compost (混合肥料), organic household waste could top up your home's electricity.

Although such "microbial fuel cells" (MFCs) have been developed in the past, they have always proved extremely inefficient and expensive. Now Chris Melhuish and technologists at the University of the West of England (UWE) have come up with a simplified MFC that costs as little as £ 10 to make.

Right now, their fuel cell runs only on sugar cubes, since these produce almost no waste when broken down, but they aim to move on to carrot power. "It has to be able to use raw materials, rather than giving it a refined fuel," says Melhuish.

Inside the walkman-sized battery, a colony of E. coli bacteria produce enzymes that break down carbohydrates, releasing hydrogen atoms. The cell also contains chemicals that drive a series of redox, or reduction and oxidation reactions, stripping electrons from the hydrogen atoms and delivering them steadily to the fuel cell's anode (正极). This creates a voltage that can be used to power a circuit.

To prove the MFC works, the researchers are using it to power a small light-sensitive robot. When a number of the cells are connected in series, they could power domestic appliances, running a 40-watt bulb for eight hours on about 50 grams of sugar.

Earlier MFCs were inefficient because they relied on energy-hungry filters and pumps. By experimenting with different anode materials, the UWE team have figured out how to make their system work: they dump the bacteria and redox chemicals directly into the cell.

In its current form, the UWE team says its organic battery can produce eight times as much power as any previous MFC. But Melhuish wants to improve this, both by scaling it up and finding a better mix of redox chemicals.

36. Which of the following would be the most appropriate title for the passage?

A. Microbial Fuel Cells　　B. Cost-efficient Microbial Fuel Cells

C. The Efficiency of Microbial Fuel Cells　　D. Organic Battery Runs Robot

37. Chris Melhuish and technologists are trying to use household wastes to _____.

A. feed domestic animals　　B. make garden compost

C. produce electricity　　D. manufacture bacteria

38. Earlier MFCs were inefficient because they _____.

A. produced very little electricity

B. required different anode materials

C. consumed much energy on filters and pumps

D. could only run domestic appliances

39. According to Melhuish, his present MFC _____.

A. is of very little use right now

B. is no more efficient than previous ones

C. consumes a lot of organic materials

D. is already considerably efficient

40. Which of the following statements is NOT TURE according to the passage?

A. The MFC is not a kind of new-developed fuel.

B. The MFC was not spread used in the past partly because of its high cost.

C. The MFC was proved to be able to power domestic appliances.

D. The previous MFC can produce eight times as much power as the current organic battery.

B. Remember to treat yourself.

C. Stick to what you need.

D. Planning is everything.

E. Waste not, want not.

The hugely popular blog the Skint Foodie chronicles how Tony balances his love of good food with living on benefits. After bills, Tony has £ 60 a week to spend, £ 40 of which goes on food, but 10 years ago he was earning £ 130,000 a year working in corporate communications and eating at London's best restaurants at least twice a week. Then his marriage failed, his career burned out and his drinking became serious. "The community mental health team saved my life. And I felt like that again, to a certain degree, when people responded to the blog so well. It gave me the validation and confidence that I'd lost. But it's still a day-by-day thing." Now he's living in a council flat and fielding offers from literary agents. He's feeling positive, but he'll carry on blogging—not about eating as cheaply as you can—"there are so many people in a much worse state, with barely any money to spend on food"—but eating well on a budget. Here's his advice for economical foodies.

41

Impulsive spending isn't an option, so plan your week's menu in advance, making shopping lists for your ingredients in their exact quantities. I have an Excel template for a week of breakfast, lunch and dinner. Stop laughing: it's not just cost effective but helps you balance your diet. It's also a good idea to shop daily instead of weekly, because, being human, you'll sometimes change your mind about what you fancy.

42

This is where supermarkets and their anonymity come in handy. With them, there's not the same embarrassment as when buying one carrot in a little greengrocer. And if you plan properly, you'll know that you only need, say, 350g of shin of beef and six rashers of bacon, not whatever weight is pre-packed in the supermarket chiller.

43

You may proudly claim to only have frozen peas in the freezer—that's not good enough. Mine is filled with leftovers, bread, stock, meat and fish. Planning ahead should eliminate wastage, but if you have surplus vegetables you'll do a vegetable soup, and all fruits threatening to "go off" will be cooked or juiced.

44

Everyone says this, but it really is a top tip for frugal eaters. Shop at butchers, delis and fish-sellers regularly, even for small things, and be super friendly. Soon you'll feel comfortable asking if they've any knuckles of ham for soups and stews, or beef bones, chicken carcasses and fish heads for stock which,

获取更多【同等学力】课程资料添加微信：xuexi-1688（考试学院） 学习省心省力 ！

more often than not, They'll let you have for free.

45

You won't be eating out a lot, but save your pennies and once every few months treat yourself to a set lunch at a good restaurant—£ 1.75 a week for three months gives you £ 21—more than enough for a three-course lunch at Michelin-starred Arbutus. It's £ 16.95 there—or £ 12.99 for a large pizza from Domino's: I know which I'd rather eat.

ocean or sea . Although the color is often red , it may also be shades of brown or yellow. The World Book Encyclopedia reports that "the discolored areas may range from less than a few square yards to ____65____."

What causes such discoloration? Red tides are generally caused by several species of single-celled organisms. These tiny organisms have hair-like projections which they use to propel themselves in water. There are about 2,000 varieties of these organisms, 30 of ____66____. These minute organisms usually stay in warm waters with high content of salt.

A red tide occurs when there is a sudden and rapid bloom of these organisms. The concentration of these organisms may swell to 50,000,000 per quart of water! Although scientists do not fully understand why this happens, it is known that these organisms accumulate when certain conditions simultaneously affect the water. These include abnormal weather, optimum temperatures, an oversupply of nutrients in the water, a generous amount of sunlight, and favorable water currents. When a heavy rainfall occurs, minerals and other nutrients are sometimes washed from the land into coastal water. ____67____. The result? Red tides!

Part Ⅵ Translation (10 points)

Directions: Translate the following passage into Chinese. Write your translation on the Answer Sheet.

Globally, most smokers start smoking before the age of 18, with almost a quarter of those beginning before the age of 10. The younger children are when they first try smoking, the more likely they are to become regular tobacco users and the less likely they are to quit.

A strong link between advertising and smoking in young people has been proven. The more aware and appreciative young people are of tobacco advertising, the more likely they are to smoke or say they intend to. As a result, the tobacco industry spends billions of dollars worldwide each year spreading its marketing net as widely as possible to attract young customers. Tobacco companies market their products wherever youth can be easily accessed—in the movies, on the Internet, in fashion magazines, and at music concerts and sports events.

In response to this threat, World No Tobacco Day 2008 campaigns for a total ban on all forms of tobacco advertising, promotion and sponsorship by the tobacco industry.
